Field of the Invention The present invention relates generally to a method for controlling the operation of a hybrid electric vehicle, and more particularly, to a method for controlling a Hybrid Electric Vehicle (HEV) control system that estimates a battery state of charge (SOC) by utilizing Battery Bus Voltage (BV) signal and hybrid electric vehicle voltage loss measurement. 2. Description of the Related Art Generally, a hybrid electric vehicle includes an engine for generating power and an electric motor that assists the power generating engine, which is installed therein. The engine and electric motor are connected to the generator and battery, respectively, and generate electricity and charge the battery by using power generated from the engine and electric motor. The battery includes a plurality of battery cells connected in series or parallel. The battery cells have individual SOC's and an overall battery SOC is estimated by adding up the SOC's of all the battery cells. If the battery cells are in good condition, the battery SOC can be accurately estimated from the total sum of SOC's. However, when the battery cells are in a degraded state, the battery SOC can not be accurately estimated from the total sum of SOC's, which reduces the performance of a Hybrid Electric Vehicle (HEV) control system that controls the engine and the electric motor. As a result, there is a need to develop an improved method for accurately estimating the battery SOC, thereby improving the performance of the HEV control system. * Licensed to the Apache Software Foundation (ASF) under one or more * contributor license agreements.
