More importantly, the sensitivity for Eu^{3+} ions showed a drastic decrease when $\sim 10^4$ counts/s were required, being of the order of 10^2 to 10^3 counts/s for solution-grown samples. In our opinion, this sensitivity decrease is probably a consequence of the presence of defects in the nanotube network. This interpretation is supported by a recent work on solution-grown Nb₂O₅ films, in which it is shown that Nb₂O₅ tubes are characterized by a high concentration of defects due to the high probability of removal of O from the tube during the MOCVD growth[22]. Light-dependent current in RGO/Eu-TCSC sensors ----- In order to check the functionality of RGO/Eu-TCSC sensors for the detection of erbium ions, we firstly prepared GO paper-like electrodes from the RGO matrix. These electrodes were obtained by a simple filtration process through polycarbonate membranes with pore size of 0.2 μm . SEM images of both GO and RGO electrodes deposited on a silicon wafer are shown in Figure 4{ref-type="fig"}. The presence of RGO layers in the GO paper-like electrodes was evidenced by the high resolution TEM image (Figure 4a{ref-type="fig"}) and their electrochemical behavior was studied by cyclic voltammetry. Voltammograms obtained for the GO paper-like electrode, using an NO₂ electrolyte in air atmosphere, are presented in Figure 4b{ref-type="fig"}.
