[Hepatocellular carcinoma with different appearance inside an aneurysm of the right sinus of valsalva: a case report]. A 61-year-old man was admitted to our hospital with a complaint of exertional dyspnea. The chest X-ray showed a dilated right atrium and a coarse intravascular shadow in the right pulmonary hilum. Color Doppler echocardiography showed a mass in the right atrial cavity. The cineangiography and computed tomography revealed a large tumor in the right atrial chamber. After the preoperative management, the cardiac tumor was completely resected through a left thoracotomy. The tumor was diagnosed as a hepatocellular carcinoma with multivocal metastasis. Fourteen months have passed since the surgery, and the patient was well without recurrence. The tumor was located very close to the sinus of valsalva and adhered to it. Pathologically, the tumor was composed of hepatocellular carcinoma with moderately to poorly differentiated hepatoid and sarcomatoid features. We report this rare case, because we could not find many cases of hepatocellular carcinoma with multivocal metastasis in the right atrium.[New psychoactive substances: what tests are there for drugs that imitate neurotransmitters?]. Since the beginning of the 1990s, there has been a considerable increase in the use of new psychoactive substances. These substances are in the form of ingestible, smoked, or otherwise injected drugs, which are not considered to be harmful or illegal and have never been used by large numbers of people before the current crisis in drug use
