1. Open an image. You can open an image you've saved in Photoshop from your computer, or you can open a website image with the 'Image' => 'From Web' command. If an image you open from a website is not the correct size or resolution for what you are doing, simply open the image in Photoshop first, then reduce its size or resolution. If you aren't sure how to crop, resize, or reshape images, refer to Chapter 10. 2. Select the Layer pull-down menu and choose Create Clipping Mask. The image appears masked to the background in a light blue, which is the default color. 3. Add or subtract pixels from the edge of the layer by using the Brush Tool (B). If you look closely at Figure 4-1a, you see pixels at the top of the layer were added. If you look at Figure 4-1b, you see that pixels were removed along the bottom of the layer. The goal is to add pixels to the image wherever you want to get a sharp edge. If you want to leave some edges blurred, use a soft brush — one with a larger `_Radius_` (also called `_Opacity_`) value. FIGURE 4-1: Be precise with the Brush Tool, or risk losing important pixels. Use the following steps to brush the edges of the image: 1. Click the Brush icon at the bottom of the Tools panel and choose the Brush Tool. The Brush tool is shown in the margin at the right in Figure 4-1. 2. Click anywhere on the image to place the Brush cursor. I placed the cursor directly above the word "Photoshop," as shown in the margin. 3. Click and drag diagonally across the edges of the layer, shown in Figure 4-1a. I dragged diagonally across the word "Photoshop." 4. When the Brush cursor crosses the edge of the layer, press and hold the Ctrl key, as shown in Figure 4-1b. A dashed line appears where the Brush cursor is closest to the edge of the layer, and the pixels are added. The pixels appear in a transparent color so that you can see the colored portions of the layer that

The Sampler Brush [Download the Photoshop CS6 10.0 brush](This is one of the most frequently used tools in Photoshop. It is used to apply the Sampler Noise effect to images. It is also used for brush sketching and painting. You can adjust the size of the brush by pressing and holding Shift and dragging the slider handle to the right or left. There is also a button in the bottom-right corner that allows you to switch between a hard-edged or soft-edged brush. The samples shown in the lower-left corner of the brush preview can be duplicated and placed anywhere on the canvas. You can also group brushes to make creating new textures easier. For more information about working with brushes, see Create an Artistic Effect Using Brushes. ![Sampler brush samples.](img/Photoshop_Brushes/Sampler_Tool.jpg "Sampler brush samples")

Independent predictors for surgical complications after selective celiac trunk artery ligation in a stepwise multiple logistic regression model. Selective ligation of the celiac trunk artery (CTA) is a surgical treatment option for arterial bleeding. Knowledge about independent predictors for surgical complications is limited. This study investigated the rates of complications after CTA ligation and analyzed predictors for postoperative complications. This study retrospectively investigated all patients undergoing elective CTA ligation in a single tertiary medical center. Indications, pre- and postoperative symptoms, clinical and laboratory findings, and perioperative complications were analyzed. A stepwise multiple logistic regression model was used to identify independent predictors for postoperative complications. Between May 2000 and September 2011, 85 patients were included in the study. Sixty-five patients (77%) were alive after a median follow-up of 39 months. Abdominal pain and vomiting were reported preoperatively by 48 (57%) and 41 (49%) patients, respectively, and were reported postoperatively by 23 (27%) and 42 (49%) patients, respectively ($p = 0.29$ and 0.04 , respectively). Preoperative jejunal angina pectoris was reported by 17 patients (20%). Postoperatively, 25 patients (29%) developed symptoms of jejunal angina, which resolved in 17 (68%) patients after a median follow-up of 8 months. Postoperative complications included rebleeding ($n = 8$, 9%), hyperammonemia ($n = 3$, 3%), and pulmonary embolism ($n = 1$, 1%). In multivariate analysis, type of operation (lumbar sympathectomy, $n = 4$, 5%; sympathectomy + gastroduodenostomy, $n = 10$, 12%; gastroduodenostomy, $n = 24$, 29%; $p = 0.008$), preoperative hyperammonemia (odds ratio [OR], 3.06; 95% confidence interval [CI], 1.21-7.78), and hyperammonemia as a function of type of operation ($p = 0.04$) were identified as independent predictors for postoperative complications. Arterial bleeding is a rare, but severe, complication after CTA ligation. This study identified independent predictors for postoperative complications after CTA ligation: preoperative hyperammonemia, type of operation, and development of hyperammonemia as a function of type of operation.
