The Power of Public Diplomacy: An Interview With Greenblatt
Photo: Greenblatt talks to journalist and author Juan Cole in his offices in New York, October 2011. By Sally Ramage, Special to The Christian Science Monitor / March 30, 2012

Nearly a decade ago, Israel's then foreign minister, Silvan Shalom, had the sensation of being followed by a huge paparazzi contingent. As he put it, people were camped outside his office to witness the great drama of the day. The surprise came when the pictures published by the press showed Mr. Shalom, an Arab politician, standing alongside an Israeli one. The images represented a rare "bipartisan" act of Israel's Foreign Ministry, the department which had made the encounter possible. "The point of this action was clearly to promote Israel's image abroad," says Ms. Ramage. "It's not clear what the political gain is for Israelis, but we've spent a lot of resources trying to do this"

Warning! Spoilers! If you have not yet reached the end of The Count of Monte Cristo in our previous two parts of our Merrily Perrilly edition, I suggest you skip this content as there will be SPOILERS. Also included in this package is a 20 minute Merrily Perrilly Original Soundtrack by Clark Aboud, and an epic 55 page digital art book by Jason Boyer. Merrily Perrilly was originally a game by beloved British indie developer MMO Interactive. It was then developed by In-Between Games, and is now being funded as a Kickstarter. The game was recently chosen as a runner up for the Digital Game Challenge at the BAFTA games awards 2014. To celebrate the game's successes thus far, and because the soundtrack was such a huge part of the experience, we are releasing a digital version of the game with these components. Working at MBF, we receive a lot of data for our international sites. We can't upload a lot of the files as we don't have the legal rights, and they are simply too big to upload through iTunes Connect. So, to be able to give everyone a clean experience, we have decided to split them all up into several smaller packs. All the data is yours to use as you wish, and is readily available through iTunes Connect, from where you can download one or all of our packs. Kiiro As many of you know, Kiiro is our nearest neighbor. However, to be able to reach us, you need to get to St. Petersburg. We thought this would be a good opportunity to say a lot more about what we do and the position you are in when we need you. You will be able to find these pages through the "About" page from the main site, but to be able to access them as soon as you reach Kiiro, you need to add them to your favorites, and then visit them from the list of favorites in the sidebar. If you have any questions, don't hesitate to contact us. We love the project and think of it as a great way of representing our community. *don't forget to sign up for the newsletter on the right, it is very helpful! The design was to build a dozen of these coaches and then to sell them in batches of 12. The parent company, the Great Western Railway wanted some to be based on an existing design and build the balance with new designs. The new design was the C29 and the parent company took their livery of Pirbright Grey and the new coach was built at Swindon. The new design was introduced in 1905 when Churchward began a new build contract for a handful of them. One hundred and seventy were built in both the 70ft and 57ft versions. For the most part the 57ft stock was used all over the system, while the 70ft stock (built to the extremes of the loading gauge) were used on services mainly starting from Paddington. the progression of non-small cell lung cancer and poor prognosis[^][@CR53]--[@CR55][^]. Following our study, we speculate that a bigger sample size for pathological examination and a longer follow-up time for our patients may help to determine whether CDK10 can be used as a diagnostic tool and therapeutic target for this disease. In conclusion, our study reveals the role of CDK10 in NSCLC and provides a novel insight into the pathogenesis of lung cancer. This information may provide a potential clinical treatment target for NSCLC patients, and may reveal a new way for molecular targeted therapies. What's new:

“The signs are clear, the end is nigh, Jesus is coming soon,” bellowed the Jehovah’s Witnesses leader Dennis Bone as I entered the parking lot for his candy-cane green and Christmas-cherry-orange rental car. On the radio he was reading from the January 15, 2015, edition of Israel Today, one of Jehovah’s Witnesses’ nonfiction magazines: “Jehovah’s Witnesses publications around the world state that ‘The end of this wicked world is drawing near and many sinister forces are poised for a great worldwide disaster. People of worldwide communities are in grave danger because of the mounting evil throughout the planet. It is certainly much worse than ever before.’ The pages of the Watchtower are filled with dire warnings of imminent events leading to the End-Time and Doomsday, and the many Bible-believing children of God [the Witnesses] are called on to prepare themselves to receive Jesus Christ and the Kingdom of Heaven.” Jehovah’s Witnesses are largely an insular, shame-based, back-slapping sect of followers living in Rutherford, New Jersey, in what they call the “Bible-governed” Kingdom of God. They eschew other religions and worldliness. They reject evolutionary science, stating that a “fact” is “God’s absolute truth.” They “deny the worship of false gods and idols of the world.” God, not a vague and untethered universe, is their “ultimate authority.” They believe in singular, triune God. Jehovah is God. He was once like us, suffered like us, died, and was resurrected, taken to heaven for a 1,000-year reign, and someday will return and rule over the kingdom on Earth where both good and evil have their true and eternal place—the latter feeling its coming downfall with every cruel storm and tidal wave. The Bible is the sole source of truth. So is it any surprise, in a world screaming at us to practice environmental caution, that influential Christian and Jehovah’s Witnesses leaders are preoccupied with the weather? A couple of years ago, the group’s National Convention, which gathers followers in their Salt Lake City headquarters, passed a resolution declaring a “Global Warning Policy”—or as members fondly call it, “the science behind

This paper addresses the evaluation of educational interventions. We examine evaluation as a process and as a product. In the first section, we relate theoretical explanations for why evaluations can be effective to practical considerations that should be applied to all evaluations. In the second section, we explore the purposes for evaluation, addressing the nature of the evidence and the problems that evaluations can be expected to address. In the third section, we investigate evaluation as a product. We identify a range of methodological criteria that good evaluations should meet and draw on three'real world
