Password Security: Supervisor, User, Hard Disk Lock. Inputs with high vibration level can disturb operation and shorten service life of an entire system, including that of a motor, a compressor, and a hydraulic pump. Inputs with high vibration level include those from a normal traffic jam, idling, operation of a construction machine, etc., and therefore, the suppression of vibration from an input such as an engine needs to be carried out. A valve stem is a part of a valve that controls the flow of a working fluid in an internal combustion engine, and undergoes a significant amount of vibration. The acoustic diaphragm and hinge (such as a spring diaphragm, or a diaphragm in a housing and a spring housing that attach the diaphragm to a housing) that attach the acoustic diaphragm to the housing support the acoustic diaphragm. When the valve stem is raised from a lowered position, the acoustic diaphragm moves toward the engine valve by the operating force of the valve stem, and pressurizes the combustion chamber. The noise level of the internal combustion engine increases gradually as an ignition delay time becomes longer, which is a period from the point when the fuel is ignited in the cylinder to the point when the spark plug generates the spark. If the acoustic diaphragm of the sound muffler is disposed in the cylinder of the engine, a sound leaked from the edge of the sound muffler to the outside is directly heard in the normal operation, and the quality of the sound of the internal combustion engine is disturbed. Particularly, when an automotive internal combustion engine is in operation, the cylinders are in a state where they are fired continuously, and the noise level of the internal combustion engine is increased gradually. As a result, the user can be annoyed by the sound of the internal combustion engine and feel discomfort. Therefore, in order to suppress the vibration of the internal combustion engine and also reduce the noise of the internal combustion engine, in the
