Riyad Mahrez, the Leicester midfielder, appears to be the first name on the board for Manchester City as his agent, Dimitri Seluk, confirmed the 26-year-old is due to return to England after helping France to a second consecutive World Cup title. City are interested in Mahrez, who has a £165,000-a-week deal at Leicester, but Seluk said he was waiting for the player's availability and, although he had heard of Manchester City's interest, it was not yet confirmed. "I know that City has been looking for Mahrez," he said. "I can confirm that. It is in the name of my client. I am waiting for his availability. He will only decide if he wants to move to another club." Mohamed Salah, the Liverpool forward, and Kalidou

Koulibaly, the Napoli centre back, have also been linked with a move to Manchester City.1. Field of the Invention The present invention generally relates to data processing systems, and more particularly, to a system and method for managing files in such a data processing system. 2.

Description of the Related Art In modern data processing systems, files are routinely used to store data. Such data processing systems may be used to track and store a plurality of files, which may be classified based on a number of criteria. For example, such files may be classified by the name of the file, the type of file, date and/or time the file was created, the size of the file, etc. A typical file system is used to organize and maintain files in a data processing system. As the number of files increase in a data processing system, maintaining a storage media which includes sufficient space to store the files becomes increasingly burdensome. For example, if a storage media having a total storage capacity of 10 terabytes of files, such as 10,000 gigabytes, is used, then approximately 10,000 gigabytes of storage capacity is required in order to store all the data (files). However, in most modern data processing systems, storage media having such a large storage capacity are relatively expensive. The cost associated with maintaining files which are classified based on such relatively expensive storage media may be relatively expensive. However, in many instances, it may be desirable to maintain files on such storage media. Therefore, a need exists for a system and method which allows files to be classified on various
