Ping Pong is a "rhythm" game where the paddles are replaced by music keys and you dance "ping-pong" between the keys. The music is made of 8 and 16bit samples and played on 5 instruments and effects. There are 3 instruments: 4-step drums, kickdrums and 3-pedal. The game is completely made with Unreal Engine and uses UnrealScript for GUI (still in development), only Windows target! An Incredible Speedrunner I'm proud to announce that I've just finished this absolutely incredible piece of software that is a runner using UnrealScript's recording and playback functions! The game is made with UnrealEngine and it's only for Windows. I'm giving away this unique and powerful application for free, hope you'll have as much fun and enjoy it as I did! UnrealEngine Contest 2 I'm participating in the UnrealEngine Contest 2! If you haven't already, you should read their contest info. Read it!! It's lots of fun! I created a unique demo to show my skills and experience (I think it's really good). If you like it, you can vote for my demo here: voting.unrealengine.com/HERE It's too late to vote for me, but you can still do it for my friend Michael's demo: voting.unrealengine.com/HERE Why I'm submitting 3 projects at once I'm having a hard time choosing which project to first talk about and I was wondering if I could get some help choosing. I would like to submit 3 projects at once, but I'm not sure if that's allowed. But I want to talk about all of them. So let me start with a little background. In the last 9 months I've been mostly programming on my second project, a ping-pong simulation game. So every now and then I have some spare time that I can dedicate to programming on my second project. Today is one of those days. Even if it wasn't my choice and I was forced to submit 3 projects, I would still submit this one first. But I don't like to force anything. I hope you won't mind a little background first before getting to the meat of the project. Ping-Pong simulation game Ping-Pong is a paddles-to-keys game. I decided to use this premise for the game I've been programming: Ping

Credit Morgan Hansen ROCKY RIVER - A bear cub from the Pallister family is celebrating with a new young snout, thanks to University of Minnesota pathologist Dr. Bradley McCauley. "We have a little young fellow here, a four-month-old cub, who was born October 7, 2013," said McCauley, lead-researcher of the Snowshoe Trails Program at the University's College of Veterinary Medicine. "This cub has a very unusual (age) because cubs leave the birthing den at 15 to 16 weeks. So we have a four-month-old cub that's just starting his, what I like to call his 'time of life,' in terms of what the body goes through and what he does. He's very hyper at this young age." At this point, the cub has only been through the growth stages of a cat 2. McCauley is busy preparing him for a new set of teeth to grow in, something the cub undergoes at about nine months of age. "This cub is just starting tooth growth at this point," said McCauley. "You can see here, he's been regressing from that." McCauley, along with Veterinary Technologist-In-Training, Anika Stucker, is preparing the cub's snout and teeth for the dry runs he is going to be taking on at the University, where she will be working as a field technician. For youngsters learning to walk, preparing teeth for their first set of teeth is a routine. "When they're five to seven months old, they'll have soft teeth and everything, and then at that point, you need to remove them because they're too soft and they can chip," said McCauley. "So to pull it out, it's a process called dental extraction. It's done a lot with kids who have cleft palette." McCauley says it's certainly not what they would do to any cub, but to remove them safely to start their second set, it is necessary. "Removing teeth for dental extraction is not something we do in people, but in animals. We use tools called dental extractors and that removes the teeth and we're left with the gum tissues that hold the teeth together," said McCauley. "We leave the bone part of the tooth and it just falls off and that is what we regrow." McC
