In this tutorial, we'll cover how to use Photoshop's tools to create a realistic photo of a celebrity. It doesn't take long to learn basic Photoshop techniques, and the results are impressive. We'll also explore some advanced Photoshop techniques including how to use selections, masks, adjustment layers, and multiple-layer blend modes. Prerequisites You will need to download and install Photoshop, available for both Windows and Mac. Photoshop is available for the PC as well as Mac OS X. Additionally, you will need to download some free software from Adobe (free for personal use) and some royalty-free stock photos. Outline Create a new document using Photoshop's File menu and creating a new file as we'll call it. Choose RGB as the color space. Group all of the layers together to unify the layers in Photoshop. Apply a Gaussian Blur to each layer. Add a reflection layer and add some color to it and then remove it with a layer mask. Delete two duplicate photos and add an adjustment layer to them. Add a layer mask to the image and add some toning to it. Save our file in a Photoshop format (.psd) file. Start by opening Photoshop CS6 and creating a new file. Click File from the menu bar and choose New, then select RGB as the color space and click OK. Place the file on a new page, then close the file. In our file you'll see the new document with a single layer with a default name such as John Doe. We want to get everything on that layer grouped together, so right-click the layer and choose Layer > Layer via Copy. Rename the layer to Celebrity (make sure that you use all capital letters). From the menu bar, choose Layer > New > Masks. Click OK. A blank new layer will appear on the layer named Celebrity. Group all of the layers together to unify the layers in Photoshop. To do that, click the layer's eye icon to make it the active (top) layer, then hit the letter G and choose Group. Repeat that operation with the layer named Celebrity, and choose Layer > New > Masks from the top menu and click OK. Add a Gaussian Blur filter to Celebrity to blur out the details of the photo, but leave the face sharp. Click Filter > Blur > Gaussian Blur and place it on the layer named Celebrity

Q: How to include a local Git repository in an Apache httpd? I have a local repository with my new code. I want to make the code available to the people who are using my httpd server. So i installed apache and git in a server. I created repository and added my code to it. Next I executed these commands: $ git init $ git add. $ git commit -m "First commit to make the code available" $ git remote add origin git@github.com:my_username/my_project.git $ git push origin master But after this I cannot view my source files in httpd/local_project on the server. I have nothing installed in httpd/local_project because i got no idea how to include my code in httpd. Can anyone help me how can I include my code in the server? A: From the git documentation, basically put your files in the httpdocs folder and edit httpd.conf to point to the directory. You may want to use relative paths, but you can handle that yourself. as an alternative to expensive new paint, and I thought this would be a good opportunity to see how much I'd be able to gain. The results: - I was able to gain about 1.5Kg of weight - I lost up to 5Kg of fatigue from cycling on a faster effort (those in the car are typically in the mid-40's) - I'm still able to burn fat as a normal workout - A good workout was around 30 minutes at about 60% effort Of the 5 weight machines, I liked the treadmill the best, and 3/5 of the others had pretty much the same number of movements and were all a little more than expected. The only real difference was the elliptical which had a lot more exercises as well as being a larger exercise area. I think the most useful things were: - The results I experienced - The new perspective on how to use machines - The natural experiment that I could try a) outdoors, or b) in the gym I'll try those things again with a few other machines when my body recovers from the gym. I could do a lot more, but my legs are still shaky. I absolutely do believe that you can use the machines to your advantage, and I'm looking forward to using the elliptical next time

Style Repair Every day, I am approached by women who express their feelings about the way they look. They admit their reluctance to discuss their feelings about their bodies, in part because of the devastating consequences that can result. Many suffer in silence and feel that they must hide the realities of their lives. So they are pleased to get my feedback, even if they cannot fully understand what I am saying. Indeed, I am often surprised at how easily women can relate to my conversations about their fears. I did not think that I was an expert on this topic, but when I began to understand the difficulties that some women experience with their appearance, I saw that I was only scratching the surface. How can you help? The first step in my process is to get to know you and to establish a sincere rapport. You will tell me what you do or don't like about your body and I will try to understand your feelings. Often I hear that you want to be more like someone else but that you do not like her body. I will help you to understand that your body is you and that you are unique. For many women, being beautiful is a private, intimate, personal matter and they would prefer that others not intrude on this. As you become more comfortable with me and more articulate, you will learn to get the guidance that you need. The last step is to define and plan for the changes that you would like to see in your life. Change takes time, but you are much more likely to succeed if you establish an effective plan that you can follow."The Avalanche players made it clear that they still have confidence in me, and I have full confidence in them," Jose Theodore said. "We still have something to accomplish. We want to win every game we play. But we also understand that there will be bumps in the road. That's what the schedule is going to be like. I think the only way to deal with these challenges is to take them as motivation and with the goal to win every game. It's going to be a long road. Now, it's important to recognize it, and realize that there is some progress and that we should be proud of that." Theodore has been talking to coach Joel Quenneville, who just completed his fifth season coaching the Blackhawks, and skated with defenseman Brent Seabrook after Saturday's practice. "I am not going to doubt myself for not playing well the last two years," Theodore said,
