turnover of cell organelles. To examine for such responses in fish species representative of those expected to be exposed to such chemicals, fish were exposed for 96 h to diethylnitrosamine (DENA), phenobarbital (PB) or both agents. Hepatic PP was observed in fish treated with PB alone and in fish treated with DENA plus PB and exposure regimens that simulate those expected in fish exposed in the environment, and assessed using immunohistochemical localization of peroxisomal matrix proteins, cytosolic and mitochondrial peroxisomal enzymes, cell proliferation and turnover of cell organelles. DENA (10-50 microM) induced hepatic PP in a concentration-
