integration We are using Oracle Database for a project where there is an existing data, some tables are there with Oracle Database and some tables are from another DBMS (say MS SQL Server). The web application will do the data import and data maintenance operations, i.e. inserts/updates/deletes of data into the Oracle Database and update data in the other tables from MS SQL Server. The solution will have one Database Connection, i.e. a Oracle Database Data Source. Will using two different DBMS in a single connection be a problem for the Oracle Database? A: No. Oracle does not have any issues with that whatsoever. Any connection you provide should be a valid Oracle DBA connection, and work directly with Oracle database, as you are indeed trying to do. - 1 L e t q (f) = - f * * 3 + 2 * f * * 2 - 1 . L e t z b e q (- 1) . S u p p o s e 0 = z * y + 4 * j - 1
